HOW TO CURE CONSUMPTION.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF DR. SCHENCK'S GREAT MEDICINES.—Will people never learn to know that a diseased liver and stomach necessarily disease the entire system? The plainest principles of common sense teach this and yet there are hundreds who ridicule the idea, and continue in the course which almost inevitably brings them prematurely to the grave. Living as the majority of the people do, at complete variance with the laws of nature, it must be apparent to all that, sooner or later, nature will revenge herself. Hence we find that persons who indulge to excess in the use of very rich or indigestible food or intoxicating drinks, invariably pay a heavy penalty in the end. The stomach becomes disordered and refuses to act: the liver fails to perform its functions, dyspepsia and its attendant evils follow, and still the suffering individuals persist in clinging to the thoroughly exploded idea of the past. Dr. SCHENCK'S medicines are recommended to all such. They bring sure and certain relief wherever they are used as directed, and all that is necessary to establish their reputation with every ailing man or woman in the lands a fair and impartial trial of them. Let those who are skeptical on this point, and who have permitted interested persons to prejudice them against these now celebrated remedies for consumption, discard their prejudices, and be governed by the principles of reason and common sense. If the system is disordered depend upon it, in nine cases out of ten the seat of the disorder will be found in the stomach and liver. To cleanse and invigorate the stomach and to stimulate the liver to healthy action, use—

SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS.—The daily increasing demand for these pills is the best evidence of their value. Thousands upon thousands of boxes are sold daily. Why? Simply because they act promptly and efficiently. Invalids who may not find it convenient to call on Dr. SCHENCK in person are informed that full and complete directions for use accompany each package of the MANDRAKE PILLS, PULMONIC SYRUP AND SEAWEED TONIC.—These medicines will cure consumption, unless the lungs are so far gone that the patient is entirely beyond the reach of medical relief.

It may be asked by those who are not familiar with the virtues of these great remedies, "How do Dr. Schenck's medicines effect their wonderful cures of consumption?"

The answer is a simple one. They begin their work of restoration by bringing the stomach, liver and bowels into an active healthy condition. It is food that cures this formidable disease. SCHENCK'S MANDRAKE PILLS act on the liver and stomach, promoting healthy secretion, and removing the bile and slime which have resulted from the inactive or torpid condition of those organs, and of the system generally. This sluggish state of the body, and the consequent accumulation of the unhealthy substances named prevent the proper digestion of food, and, as a natural consequence creates disease, which results in prostration and finally in death.

SCHENCK'S PULMONIC SYRUP and SEAWEED TONIC, when taken regularly, mingle with the food, with the digestive organs, make good and rich blood, and as a natural consequence, give flesh and strength to the patient. Let the faculty say what it may, this is the only true cure for consumption. Experience has proved beyond the shadow of a doubt, and thousands are to-day alive and well who a few years since were regarded as hopeless cases, but who were induced to try Dr. SCHENCK'S remedies, and were restored to permanent health by their use.

One of the first steps the physician should take with a consumptive patient is to invigorate the system. Now how is this to be done? Certainly not by giving medicines that exhaust and enervate—medicines that impair instead of improve the functions of the digestive organs. But SCHENCK'S medicines cleanse the stomach and bowels of all substances which are calculated to irritate or weaken them. They create an appetite—promote healthful digestion—make good blood, and, as a consequence, they invigorate and strengthen the entire system and more especial by those parts which are diseased. If this cannot be done, then the case must be regarded as a hopeless one.

If the physician finds it impossible to make a patient feel hungry, if the deceased person cannot partake of good nourishing food and properly digest it, it is impossible that he can gain in flesh and strength; and it is equally impossible to bring a patient to this condition so long as the liver is burdened with diseased bile, and the stomach laden with unhealthy slime.

Almost the first request made to the physician by a consumptive patient is that he will prescribe medicines that will allay the cough, night sweats and chills, which are the sure attendants on consumption. But this should not be done, as the cough is only an effort of nature to relieve itself, and the night sweats and chills are caused by the diseased lungs. The remedies ordinarily prescribed do more harm than good. They impair the functions of the stomach, impede healthy digestion, and aggravate rather than cure the disease.

These facts, after all, nothing like facts which to substantiate a position, and it is upon facts that Dr. Schenck's relies. Nearly all who have taken his medicines in accordance with his directions have not only been cured of consumption, but, from the fact that these medicines act with wonderful power upon the digestive organs, patients thus cured speedily gain flesh. Cleansing the system of all impurities, they lay the foundation for a solid, substantial structure, restoring these organs to health, they create an appetite. The food, so properly assimilated, the quantity of blood is not only increased, but is made rich and strong and in the face of such a condition of the system all disease must be banished.

Full directions accompany each of the medicines, so that it is not absolutely necessary that patients should see Dr. SCHENCK personally, unless they desire to have their lungs examined. For this purpose he is at his office, No. 15 North Sixth St., corner of Commerce, Phila., every Saturday, from 9 A. M. until 1 P. M.

Advice is given without charge, but for a thorough examination with his Respirometer the fee is $3.

WITHIN THE VEIL.

BY WILLIAM H. BURLEIGH.

I said once; "Dark and cold—
Ah! cold and dark the grave to which we tend,
Where lover parts from lover, friend from friend,
And life's brief tale is told,
With its pathetic ending—'dust to dust!"
Now, with a new-born faith and loveful trust,

I say: "The grave is blest!
Oh, call it dark no more, since she is laid
In its still depths, whose life a sunshine made,
In good deeds manifest,
To cheer the gloom of sorrow and despair,
And pour its bright beams 'round her, everywhere."

She taught us how to live!
Her blameless life, from mean ambitions free,
That loved the right it dared to do and be,
Lessons sublime did give
Of a true nobleness—for all that shone
Sunlike in saintly souls she made her own!

She taught us how to die!
With what a holy joy aside she flung
The body's bondage, and exulting sprung
To immortality!
Who then should fear to tread, as she hath trod,
The path, through death, that leadeth unto God!

Oh grave! a sacred trust
To thee is given! No common ashes sleep
Within thy guardian arms! Sacredly keep
This consecrated dust,
Till, quickened with new life, it shall arise,
A glorious body, fitted for the skies!

THE LEAP.

I

It was past midnight—the lights on the stone-bridge which crosses the river Main at Frankfort were still burning, though the footsteps of passengers had died away for some time on the pavement—when a young man approached the bridge from the town with hasty strides. At the same time, another man advanced in years was coming towards him from Sachsenhausen, the well known suburb on the opposite side of the river. The two had not yet met, when the latter turned from his path, and went towards the parapet, with the evident intention of leaping from the bridge into the Main.

The young man followed quickly, and laid hold of him.

'Sir,' said he, 'I think you want to drown yourself.'

'You think right, sir; but what is that to you?'

'Nothing at all: I was only going to ask you to do me a favor to wait a few minutes, and allow me to join you. Let us draw close to each other, and arm and arm, take the leap together. The idea of making the journey with a perfect stranger, who has chanced to come for the same purpose, is really rather interesting. Indeed, I have not experienced anything so exciting for some time; and I should not have thought that in my last hour so pleasant an occurrence would happen. Come, sir, for many years I have not made a request to any human being; do not refuse me this one, which must be my be my last. I assure you, I do not remember having ever spent so many words about any request whatever.'

So saying, the young man held out his hand: his companion took it, and he then continued, with a kind of enthusiasm: so be it, arm in arm—and now let us be quick about it; it is really charming to feel a human heart near me in these last moments. I do not ask what you are, good or bad—come, let us down.'

The elder of the two, who had at first been in so great a hurry to end his existence in the waters of the river, now restrained the impetuosity for the younger.

'Stop, sir,' said he, while his weary eyes tried to examine the features of his companion as well as the flickering light of the nearest lamp would allow him—'Stop, sir; you seem to me too young to leave life in this way. I am afraid you are committing a rash act; for a man of your years, life must have still bright prospects.'

'Bright prospects!—in the midst of rottenness and corruption! Come, let us make an end of it.'

'And so young! Your experience must have been very sad to make you consider all creatures which have the human form a brood of serpents.'

'Oh, serpents are noble beings compared with men; they follow the impulse of their nature; they are no hypocrites, bearing virtue on their lips and vice in their hearts.'

'I pity you from my heart; but there are certainly many exceptions to this miserable rule.'

'I have found none,' said the young man.

'Then it may be considered, though a poor one, that you have found one in this solemn hour. However much men are given to falsehood, there are very few who lie in the hour of death, within sight of eternity. But for me, I have never told a falsehood in my life, and I would not for anything in the world enter upon the dark road with a lie upon my lips; and therefore when I tell you that I am not a villain, as you seem to think me, but an honest and upright man, I am telling you the simple, unvarnished truth.'

'Indeed?—that is interesting. And so I must meet the only honest man I ever saw in the world, when I am on the point of leaving it, and in his own company.'

'Let me go alone, and do you remain here. Believe me, there are many good and honest people who could render life charming for you. Seek them, and you are sure to find them.'

'Well, the first one I have found already. But if life presents itself to you in hues so bright, I am surprised you should wish to leave it.'

'Oh, I am only a poor old sickly man, unable to earn anything, and who can endure no longer that his only child, an angel of a daughter, should work day and night to maintain him, and even sometimes to procure him luxuries. No, sir, to allow this longer I must be a tyrant, a barbarian.'

'What sir?' exclaimed the other, almost terrified, 'you have an only daughter sacrificing herself for your sake?'

'And with what patience, what sweetness, what love, what perseverance. I see her sinking under her toil and her deprivation, and not a word of complaint escapes her lips.—She works and starves, and still has always a word of love, an affectionate smile for her father.'

'Sir, and you want to commit suicide! Are you mad?'

'Dare I murder that angel? The thought pierces my heart like a dagger,' said the old man, sobbing.

'Sir, you must have a bottle of wine with me; I see a tavern over yonder. Come, you must tell me your history; and, if you have no objection, I will then tell you mine. But this much I say at once—there is no occasion for you to leap into the river. I am rich, a very rich man; and if things really are as you represent, your daughter will no longer work, and you shall not starve.'

The old man allowed himself to be dragged along by his companion. In a few minutes, they were seated at a table in the tavern, with full glasses before them, and each examining curiously the features of the other.

Refreshed and comforted by the effects of the wine, the old man began;

My history is soon told. I am a mercantile man; but fortune never favored me. I had money myself and I loved and married a poor girl. I could never begin business on my own account. I took a situation as bookkeeper, which I held until I became useless from age and younger men were preferred to me. Thus my circumstances were always circumscribed, but my domestic happiness was complete. My wife was an angel of love, kindness, and fondness, good and pious, active and affectionate; and my daughter is the true image of her mother. But age and illness have brought me to the last extremity, and my conscience revolts against the idea of the best child in the world sacrificing her life for an old useless fellow. I cannot have much longer to live; and I hope the Lord will pardon me for cutting off a few days or weeks from my life, in order to preserve or prolong that of my dear Bertha.'

'For Heaven's sake, what is he?—What has happened? Something must have happened—this is the first time he has stayed away all night.'

'The misfortune is very great.'

'Oh, my poor father, what shall I hear?'

The young man seemed to observe the terrible marks of anxiety with great interest, then, laying hold of the room he said 'Do not be frightened, my dear, girl; it is nothing of great importance. Your father met an old acquaintance, who invited him to a tavern. They had some wine together; but when the landlord came for his bill, your father's friend had decamped, and left him to pay the score. He had not sufficient money for this; and now the man will not let him go until he is paid, and he declares that unless he gets his money he will send him to prison.'

'To prison!—my father to prison!' exclaimed the girl. 'Can you tell me how much the bill comes to?'

'Three florins and a half.'

'Oh God!' sighed the girl, 'all I have does not amount to more than one florin; but I will go at once to Madame Berg, and beg of her to advance me the money.'

'Who is Madame Berg?'

'The milliner for whom I work.'

'But if Madame Berg does not advance the money—what then?' The girl burst into tears.

'I am much afraid she will refuse. I already owe her one florin, and she is very hard.'

'For what purpose did you borrow the money you owe her?'

The girl hesitated to reply.

'You may trust me; I take the deepest interest in your misfortunes, and I sincerely wish I could assist you; but I am only a poor clerk myself. Tell me for what purpose did you borrow that florin?'

'Well, my father is very weak, and occasionally requires strengthening; I borrowed that money to get a quarter of a fowl for him.'

'Under these circumstances, I fear Madame Berg will not give you any more. Here is one florin, but that is all I possess. Have you any valuable, upon which we could raise some money?' Bertha considered for a moment.

'I have nothing,' said she at length, but my poor mother's prayer-book.—On her death-bed she entreated me not to part with it, and there is nothing in the world I hold more sacred than her memory and the promise I gave her; but still for my father's sake, I must not hesitate.' With a trembling hand, she took the book down from the shelf. 'O sir,' said she, 'during many a sleepless night I have been accustomed to write the secret thought of my heart on the blank leaves at the end of the book. I hope no one will ever know whose writings they are: will you promise me that?'

'Certainly, my dear Bertha. Do not alarm yourself; I will take care that your secrets shall not be profaned.—But now get ready, that we may go.

Whilst she left the room to put on her bonnet and shawl, Karl T——(for the reader will have guessed that the young man was no other than our hero) glanced over the writing of the girl in the book, and his eyes filled with tears of emotion and delight as he read the outpourings of a pure and pious heart; and when they had left the house together, and she was walking beside him with a dignity of which she seemed entirely unconscious, he cast upon her looks of respect and admiration.

They first went to Madame Berg, who did not give the advance required, but assured the young man that Bertha was an angel. Certainly this praise Mr. T—— valued higher than the money he had asked for. They pawned the book, and the required sum was made up. Bertha was overjoyed.

'But if you spend all your money to-day,' remarked the young man, 'on what will you live to-morrow?'

'I do not know, but I trust in God. I shall work the whole night through.'

'Yes, trust in God firmly, and He will help you,' exclaimed Karl with an enthusiasm which almost betrayed the emotion he felt.

When they came to the tavern, the young man went in first to prepare old Mr. Schmidt for the part he wished him to act; then he brought Bertha. It is impossible to describe the joy he felt when he saw the young girl throw herself in her father's arms, and press him to her heart.

'O father,' said she, 'what a dreadful night I have had—how uneasy I have been about you; but, thank God, I have you again; and her face brightened up with a smile of joy.

She paid the bill, and triumphantly led him home. T—— accompanied them, and said he had a few more kreutzers in his pocket; she had better go and get them something to eat.—And then you should have seen this darling girl, how she busied herself, and how gladly she set about it; the young man felt as if he could fall at her feet and worship her. It was late before T—— went home; that night, but the leap from the Main Brucke was no more thought of. He came to the house every evening, in order, as he said, to share with them his scanty earnings.

'About a fortnight after, as he was going away one evening, he said to Bertha: 'Will you become my wife? I am only a poor clerk, but I am honest and upright.'

Bertha blushed, and cast her eyes to the ground.

'Can you love me, Bertha?' he said again in an overflow of feeling.

She was silent and did not raise her head; but she held out her hand. He seized it, and kissed it fervently:

'Bertha,' said he, 'I love you immeasurably; you have saved my life.'

A few days after the young couple, simply but respectably attired, and accompanied by Herr Schmidt, went to church, where they were married in a quiet way. When they came out man and wife, an elegant carriage was standing at the door, and a footman in rich livery let down the steps.

'Come,' said the happy husband to his bewildered wife, who looked at him with amazement.

Before she could utter a word, the three were seated in the carriage, driving away at a quick pace. The carriage stopped before a splendid house in the best part of Frankfort. They were received by a number of domestics, who conducted them to apartments decorated in the most costly style.

'This is your mistress,' said T—— to the servants, and her commands you have henceforth to obey.—My darling wife,' said he, then, turning to Bertha, 'I am Karl T——, one of the wealthiest men of this city. This house is yours, and these servants will attend to you. I hold a pledge from you that riches will not corrupt your heart. Here it is in the prayer-book of your poor mother, written by your own hand. If thou wert to give me all the treasures of the world, O Lord, I would still remain Thine humble servant. For what is gold before thee, that looketh into the heart? Thine is mine heart, and Thine it shall remain.'

'It is the Lord's and thine, my beloved Karl,' whispered Bertha, and sunk in his arms.

'Hurrah for the leap from the Main Brucke!' exclaimed T——, embracing his father-in-law.

A STRANGE MANIA.—The Louisville Courier Journal relates this singular story.

A man who gave his name as Chas. Watkins, and who turns out to be Charles Livingstone, notorious disreputable character in the city, was arrested while trying to enter the house of Mr. Schaeffer, on Portland avenue before daylight yesterday morning. This man has a strange mania for which a name is yet to be invented. He will break into a house at night just for the luxury of standing by the bedside of a person and looking at him or her, as the case may be as they lay asleep. He has been known to do this on several occasions, and, after standing there and gazing for hours, leave without disturbing anything, and close the doors carefully after him.

About six months ago he got himself into serious trouble in this way being arrested as a burglar and held to answer. He entered the room of a young lady after she had retired and gone to sleep. Taking his position beside the bed, he stood gazing at the beautiful sleeper till, perhaps conscious of the presence near her, she awoke and was frightened terribly. By the faint light of the moon as it shone through the lattice she saw the stranger standing motionless at her bedside. She screamed and fainted, and the inmates of the house, aroused by the noise, came rushing in just in time to catch the intruder.

The affair caused a good deal of excitement and no little gossip at the time, but subsequently facts have been proved that the man was harmless, and went there just to satisfy this singular longing of his. He has been caught in several such places since then, but at no time has he ever disturbed anything or anybody. He was presented to the court as a suspected felon, a charge hardly justified by the facts in the case and held in $500 for good behavior for twelve months. His case is a strange one indeed.

A Reverie.

BY GIPSY MILDE.

I have been rambling all evening, and rambling over old scenes and haunts always did cast a weird spell over me. Perhaps 'tis the hazy, warm evening, or may be 'tis the crude and varied notes of the frogs, that so strangely influences me. Who can tell? Who can fathom the cause of these soul-dreams? Who can describe the emotions that at times carry us off to the Invisible? These reveries wherein the soul is absorbed? Standing alone and silently gazing at the old homestead and the hills around, how the gathered golden memories of the past crowd around me! There the smoke from the burning brush, hovering like a blue canopy over the hills, and I watch it, as I used to in years agone. There the same beaten path around the fields my child-feet so often trod. There the same woods whose every tree I was familiar with, and whose green and brown mosses so often pillowed my head in the warm, still summer days. Then, careless as a kitten, and free as a bird, looking up through the green leaves to the sky beyond, I dreamed the happy hours away. There, the same meadow, whose earliest flowers I culled, again in its dream, press my feet on the velvet turf. Kissed softly by the zephyrs, even now the sweetness of their perfume is present. There, too, is the old elm tree, near its base wide-spreading branches my sister and I so often played, and talked of our dolls, birds and flowers, the sky and angels, as children will. Life was then an unmarked plain, a fair and sunny slope, into whose recesses we had not even entered; but hovered outside, fluttering our tiny wings among the flower-spangled banks, limpid streams, and unclouded light of childhood's realm. The world was yet unknown.

Then there comes a change over the spirit of my dream. The old house is still the same, but the same faces are not seen, the same voices are not heard. The night-wing of sorrow has tarried heavy and dark over Oakland. Grief, like a great hammer, seemed to pelt us lower, lower to the profounds of woe. Do I not now feel the unutterable anguish I then felt, when these sad, sad words fell upon my ear? "Papa is dead!" Dead, and not one word, not one caress, not one loving glance, nothing for her who wanted so much. Nothing, but to gaze on the white, cold, still face, so beautiful in its stillness.—And how each member of that stricken circle pass before me. Kind friends would speak to us of his gain, his triumph over death. Ah! we knew all this, knew that his last moments were spent, divested of all horror, that often attends even the christian's couch; no groans, no heaving, no struggling, calmly, quietly and peacefully the floated to the Land of Stars as gently as the breath of sleeping flowers, his spirit was borne to Paradise. Though we knew he had found the peace that endeth not, the happiness that wanteth not, the rest that satisfieth, the love that knoweth no diminution, the knowledge that fadeth not away—knowing all this, we could not cease to weep. It did not heal the wound. And then the days and weeks that followed. How mournfully the wind whistled through the hall! How we would startle when fancying we heard his step, his cheerful voice! There was the hat he wore, and the brown coat! Yes, there were all his worn garments. Would he never wear them more? And again that crushing pain in our hearts. We sat, his chair at the table and paused, waiting for the voice in prayer, that never would be heard. Again at evening worship, how every word from him—who led our broken band—was beaten back by a tide of anguish, at the memory of him, who could never kneel with us again. Ah! Memory, be still! We learned then how much the heart can bear. We must learn to do without our father.

And our brother, too, ere his bright and glorious manhood had reached its noontide, faded from our sight. "Ah! that was a sad, sad heartleaf; and life will pass, we will form new ties, new associations and new loves, but will they fill the vacancies? Will the smiles, the endearments, the love, the care of our dear living, take the place of our loved dead? No, no; the chain is bright and golden still, but some of its links are lost that cannot be replaced. All the past cannot be relived. Childhood has gone, womanhood is here, and yet are not the burdens, the duties, the pleasures that grow upon us, as the years grow, sweet to bear? Does not Life daily grow more earnest, more beautiful? Yes! Then out of this dream, aroused from this reverie, away from the old homestead and its tender reminiscences—out, onward to the Highway of Action, where there is work, life and beauty, and who would be a child again?

Prof. Silliman, of Yale College, is famed far and wide for the marvelous sesquipedality—as he would call it—of his language. The following sentence, formed the introduction to a lecture on oxygen: "The oleaginous and luminiferous effects of oxygenated muriatic acid are so fugacious and segregated that we are totally unable to recognize the contents by any practical or theoretical view of their synquinous corusations and sinuosities which they so often exhibit."

"My dear," said a rural wife to her husband, on his return from town, "what was the sweetest thing you saw in bonnets in the city?" "The ladies' faces, my love."

Editorial Brevities.

A SLIGHT unpleasantness is said to exist between General Hancock and President Grant.

A good thing was perpetrated by the Senate in voting to give the same pay to female as male clerks.

THE general verdict of the people is that Congress has done plenty of talk but very little work, and therefore had better adjourn.

It is reported that four negroes were treated to a champaign supper in Rochester, for voting the Democratic ticket. Nuff said.

Alexander H. Stevens sits bolstered up with pillows, and is so feeble that he can barely rise and hobble about the room a little on crutches.

SOMEBODY has canvassed the Senate and found that not more than half a dozen Republican Senators would vote for a general amnesty bill.

FEARS are entertained that Chief Justice Chase is so rapidly breaking down in health that he will not much longer be able to sit on the Bench.

THE Methodist for 22 reports the vote on lay delegation as:—For, 4905; against, 1589; which gives a favorable three-fourth vote and a surplus of 35.

EX-GOV. ANDREW G. CURTIN has been re-elected to the Presidency of the Pennsylvania Reserve Association. The soldiers will never forget the Soldiers' Friend.

Senator Brownlow has to be brought to the Senate by attendants; his voice is gone and he votes by proxy, sending his vote to the Secretary by a page.—Yet he is in his seat every day.

Senator Saulsbury, of Delaware, has been in the Senate eleven years, and never introduced a bill until a few days ago, when he called for $225,000 for improvements in the Delaware river.

DECORATION day was generally observed. It is meet the fallen braves should be honored, for while they sleep the sleep that knows no waking, the living are learning the cost of peace.

THE "Herald" declares New York to be "the glory of Ireland," and it would seem so in the fact that in the recent election for Assistant Alderman, 12 out of 21 successful candidates were natives of Ireland.

THE case of Dr. Schoeppe was before the Supreme Court on Friday last—District Attorney Maglaughlin argued in favor of the Commonwealth, and W. H. Miller, Esq., in favor of Schoeppe. The Court reserved their decision.

WHAT the Fenians hoped to accomplish by their raid on Canada is hard to define. For the bold Irishmen to vent their fury on the poor Canadians is like the schoolboy's game of whipping the little brother of the boy that hurts him in order to have revenge.—The result of the Fenian hope, whatever it might have been, is seen in another part of our paper.

IN the newly revised Constitution of the State of Illinois, some excellent provisions are made for the protection of the State and the people against railroad monopolies, combinations, extortions and impositions. This policy might judiciously be followed in Pennsylvania. The Constitution of this Commonwealth ought to be amended to meet the same evils, which the people of Illinois like ourselves have long borne, and finally found a remedy.

HON. J. S. BLACK has reviewed Senator Wilson in a scathing letter, in which he comes to the rescue of Cobb, Thompson, Toucey and Buchanan, but fails to make known or even mention the name of General Cass, who published the reasons that led him to resign in December, 1860, which were in brief "that he could not remain in the Cabinet and yet be loyal to his country." If Cass could say that, it seems very singular that the rest were so blind.

☞ It is time for the Republican party to look around for the best man to win for Congress in this Congressional District. An election will not be made as easily as it was two years ago when this county gave over a thousand majority. Since then the party has been considerably demoralized by prominent men claiming to be good Republicans and good party men. The party machinery has been unhinged, and it will not be safe to attempt the crushing business in making the nomination. We cannot believe that Mr. Morrell would be a strong candidate this fall—a new man would be stronger—and believing so we feel it our duty to warn the party in time that possible defeat may be avoided. If men in high places do not see the "situation" as we do it is because they will not come down to consult public opinion.

☞ We suppose it pays the Blair County Radical to work under the lash—if it don't the editors are not smart.

Plain Talk by the "Party Organ,"

We copy the following plain talk from the last Journal & American, and we hope every Republican in the county will read it carefully that the "situation" may be understood. One of the editors of that paper is now holding an office received from "prominent disorganizers," and what they will think of his proscriptive declarations against them will not be very hard to guess. The Journal & American says:

"The Globe misapprehends, or misrepresents our position, in intimating that we have any sympathy with unrepentent disorganizers. We may have manifested an undue anxiety to see the breach in the party healed up, and harmony and peace restored in its ranks, but we have conversed with so many Republicans in the county who have frankly told us that they were deceived by leading disorganizers last fall and now seeing their error, are determined not to be made fools of again, and we felt like meeting all such half way, and giving them our hand, forgetful of the past, and hopeful of the future. This however, is as far as we can go. We cannot and will not tolerate the leaders of any disorganizing movement in any way, believing as we do that the only way to preserve our party organization intact hereafter, is to teach all such men that their action is political death. We will go a step further and say that no prominent disorganizer, or 'fast and loose' politician shall ever again receive our support for any position, should they by any means be foisted on the convention. Considering it as much our duty to our party as anything else, we shall oppose all such, and use our influence to prevent their election. These are our sentiments as plainly as we can express them."

"No prominent disorganizer, or 'fast and loose' politician shall ever again receive our (Journal & American) support for any position, should they by any means be foisted on the Convention."

That's a plain declaration of war against what might be the action of the County Convention. It is an open declaration that the Journal & American will oppose the election of such of the nominees of the Republican Convention as might be named who were "prominent disorganizers." If such is to be the "situation" it would be perfectly right and proper for the Journal & American now to name the "prominent disorganizers" that the party may know who the men are that the "party organ" will not support if nominated. We do not want to see any opposition this fall to the nominees of the Republican Convention—the action of the Convention will be, as it always should be, the voice and will of the party, and a refusal to support the nominees would be disorganization—treason to the party by any man claiming to be a Republican or party man.

☞ We have been asked by several Republicans what kind of a ticket we would be willing to support this fall. To all we say we will support any kind of a ticket the Republican County Convention will put in nomination.—If the Convention should nominate a good strong ticket we will be well pleased,—if it should nominate a weak ticket the responsibility must rest with the voters in every district—good or bad, we intend to support the ticket, the whole ticket.

The difference we can see,
"Twixt tweedledum and tweedledee,"
Is, that Cloyd wasn't a nominee,
And Morrell only wants to be.

Mr. Morrell has the nomination of his own county, but that don't make him the nominee of Blair, Huntingdon and Mifflin. Until Mr. Morrell is nominated, Republicans have a right to have a choice, and if that choice should not be Mr. Morrell it will most likely be somebody else.

That's the difference we can see,
Twixt tweedledum and tweedledee.

"Huntingdon county has been honored by the State. She has a United States Senator, and is therefore expected to stand by the party which has thus honored her."—Perry County Freeman.

Had Huntingdon county not been honored as she was it is not likely that the Republican party would have been crushed last fall; and Cremer, instead of printing a guerrilla organ, would be cultivating strawberries and other good things, a business he is better fitted for than playing politician.

☞ We hope the Journal & American editors will reconsider their rash, unpeaceful declarations. "Let us have peace." The Convention may nominate men not of our choice,—if it should, we will not feel at liberty as a party editor to oppose them. The majority of a Convention is always supposed to be the will of the party, and every nominee should receive the support of party men and party papers.

☞ As the Journal & American editors have given public notice that they will repudiate Republican nominations this fall if not made to please them, would it not be saving time and expense if gentlemen who want to be candidates would first call upon the editors of that paper and secure a "pass?"

☞ The rule intended to be applied to this county by other counties in this Senatorial District, that because the Republicans in this county don't all think and act alike they should be denied a candidate, might with the same justice be applied to Cambria in making choice of a candidate for Congress.

A REMINISCENCE.—The one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of Stephen Girard's birthday was observed at the College which bears his name, on the 21st inst. These anniversaries are increasing in interest, we are pleased to learn, every year, as the number of graduates from that noble institution becomes larger. From it there have gone many young men, who have been tutored and fostered by its beneficent regulations, and now in every section of the Union, probably, there is a representative College boy. Many of them have figured conspicuously in political affairs, while the most of them have exemplified the teachings of the institution in becoming good citizens, and have received their reward in popular esteem. No cause has yet been discovered to reflect against the wisdom of the founder in establishing for the good of young men, and thereby for the good of the nation, the Girard College; nor can there be. The mystery to us is that while the class for which the College is expressly designed is rapidly increasing, but few if any philanthropists have erected in other cities of our land, an institution with similar objects. The need of such institutions is greatly felt, as the present College can not accommodate all that seek for admission; and it is to be hoped that the day is not distant when capitalists will look to the welfare of the rising generation of orphans, and provide more institutions for their moral and intellectual training. The name of Stephen Girard is a household word, as he has left a memorial more fitting than the marble monument, and as lasting as the minds of those who have gathered from the store house of his munificence.

☞ If this Senatorial District should be lost to the Republicans this fall, the next Senate will be Democratic, and that's what is troubling a few interested organs and politicians in the District and at Harrisburg. Two years ago, when the party was united, the party majority was from ten to twelve hundred—last year the Cremer, Scott & Co. faction reduced it to five hundred.

Accident on the Penna. Railroad.

LANCASTER, May 24.—The Philadelphia express train going east this morning at 4 o'clock plunged into an emigrant train going west, which was standing at Leaman Place. The switch connecting the two tracts had been left open by the criminal neglect of the conductor of some freight train which had passed over the road during the night, and the express train at sharp speed was thus led from its own track directly against the locomotive of the emigrant train. The only person killed was a brakeman on the express, named Thomas Swayne, of Philadelphia, who died to his post of duty, and deserves the honors of a brave man. He had been married but five months. Two German emigrants were injured, and were sent to Lancaster by special car as soon as it was possible. The express, baggage and mail cars were tossed across the track, and all the inmates escaped by jumping. Some of the emigrant cars were driven by the concussion a quarter of a mile to the rear of their own train. The accident is one which no foresight on the part of the company could have prevented, and the officers of the road owe it to themselves to prosecute the criminal to the full extent of the law.

CONFLICT WITH A MAD LION.—A singular contest took place lately in a Mexican village near Montery. The Periodico Official of that city gives the particulars:—

"Two young brothers, Eugenio and José Maria, sons of Don Francisco Cantu, were engaged in cleaning out a well, at a place called Los Positor.—Suddenly a rabid lion appeared, and violently rushed upon one of the men, Eugenio, knocking him senseless to the ground. The other young man, twenty years of age, on seeing the imminent danger of his brother, rushed in turn upon the beast, who immediately abandoned his prey and furiously faced the one who intended to dispute him.

"José Maria possesses extraordinary strength, and having succeeded in drawing his arms around the beast in an advantageous manner, he attempted to choke it. The young man and the beast rolled on the ground for some time, and finally the beast freed itself from the hold of its oppresser, in a dying condition, and the brave Cantu finished killing it by smashing its head with an agricultural instrument which he was using at the time when he was attacked. The two young men were hurt more less; the beast was attacked by hydrophobia."

The statistics as compiled at Washington immediately after the close of the war, for the purpose of refuting the assertion of all the principal newspapers that the Union army was composed principally of foreigners: Germans, 176,800; Irish, 144,200, British-Americans, 53,500; English, 45,500; Promiscuous Nationalities, 48,400; Nationality Unknown, 26,500; Native Americans, 1,523,300. Total, 2,018,200.

The brave only know how to forgive; it is the most refined and generous pitch of virtue human nature can arrive at. Cowards have done good and kind actions—cowards have fought, nay, sometimes conquered; but a coward never forgave; it is not in his nature; the power of doing it flows only from a strength and greatness of soul, conscious of resenting every fruitless attempt to interrupt its happiness.

Two girls named Bennett and Locke, aged about nineteen, have formed a partnership and purchased a good farm in Warren county, Indiana. One of them attends to the house and the other "bosses" the farm. They to be geare said tting along nicely.

The Congressional Question.

At the request of Hon. A. A. Barker, we publish his reply to an editorial article in the Johnstown Tribune, refused publication in that paper. As the nomination for Congress is not yet made, we think it perfectly proper that Mr. Barker should be heard:

EBENSBURG, MAY 24th, 1870.

To the Editors of the Huntingdon Globe:

I desire, through the columns of your paper, to make a reply to certain unfounded allegations contained in an editorial article in the Johnstown Tribune of the 13th inst., in reference to the recent Congressional contest in this county. The editor has seen proper to assert that the opposition to Mr. Morrell in most of the northern districts of the county grew out of the hostility to the movement made last winter for the increase of judicial facilities at Johnstown, Mr. Morrell being a resident of Johnstown, and occupying no doubtful attitude toward the measure, and that this side issue had the effect of giving to Mr. Barker more than half of his delegates. I pronounce this statement to be utterly destitute of truth. It is well known that I was hostile to the bill increasing the jurisdiction of the District Court, as well as the subsequent effort to remove the county seat to Johnstown, of both which measures Mr. Morrell informed me in Washington during the session of the Legislature, he was the firm and steadfast friend, and that if both propositions failed he would exert all his influence in favor of a Southern Legislative ticket on the distinct issue of the removal question. But that either I, or my friends attempted to make any of these questions an issue in the northern portion of the county at the late delegate election is a sheer and naked fabrication, and is unsupported by the facts. The removal question, therefore, neither gave me a delegate in the northern portion of the county, nor did it of itself take a single delegate away from me. So far as my friends were concerned everywhere in the county the contest was fought on the ground that I had not received the common usages of the party having been treacherously dealt with by the Republicans of Southern Cambria four years ago, and acting on the positive pledge made me more than a year ago, [that my just claims should be recognized] by the very same wire pullers and instruments of Mr. Morrell, who are now attempting to force him on the district the third time as a candidate. The question was, and it was well understood, shall that pledge be redeemed in good faith or shall it be fraudulently, corruptly and basely violated? On that issue, standing on its own merits and uninfluenced by moneyed, or other corrupt considerations, I affirm what I know to be the truth, when I say that outside of the election districts embraced within the jurisdiction of the District Court, Mr. Morrell could not have elected a single delegate, and that he would have been in a minority in the convention. Nor is it true, as the Tribune asserts, that it was threateningly announced that he (Morrell,) should not receive the endorsement of his county because of his identification with the local interests of Johnstown. No such threat was ever thought of or made by me, nor was it ever authorized to be made by any man who supported me. It is purely an after thought and is intended to bolster up Mr. Morrell and his friends in what they know and feel to have been a base violation of plighted faith. Although it is true, as the Tribune declares, that Mr. Morrell took no part personally in the contest, the old maxim nevertheless remains in full force that "whatever a man does through an agent is held to be his own act." Mr. Morrell's emissaries, employees of the Cambria Iron Company secured the entire northern section of the county a few days before the delegate election, and never, in the history of Cambria county politics, was there displayed such shameful and unblushing corruption. Money was freely used in seducing men who were publicly pledged as my friends, and when that failed in accomplishing its iniquitous purpose, the promise of Assistant Marshalships for taking the census was substituted in place of greenbacks, and in more than one instance effectually fed the desired effect. Here is a specimen case. One of Morrell's agents, and the most unscrupulous of the whole pack in the prostitution of men's political consciences, had an interview with one of my warmest friends, the result of which is given in the following extract from a letter which I received from him dated May 4th, three days before the delegate election: "I have had several offers made to me since I last saw you. I declined them. Finally I was offered a Marshalship of a sub-district if I would support Mr. Morrell. I have concluded to accept it." In another letter of the same date, addressed to a different person, the same writer says: "I hate to go back on B——, but there is over five hundred [dollars in that job [the Marshalship] which is a big thing. It is needless to say that this man was a Morrell delegate to the County Convention, and that he is now one of the Assistant Marshals of Cambria county. This is only one of several cases of a like inamous character, and yet the Tribune has the mendacity to say that Mr. Morrell has cause to be proud of his friends for they stood by him manfully against desperate combinations and expedients. Here then, I dismiss the subject and in view of such wholsale corruption and political debauchery on the part of the special friends and agents of Mr. Morrell immediately preceding the delegate election I ask every honest Republican whether I am not right in my conclusion that the so called recommendation of Mr. Morrell was not a legitimate expression of the Republican sentiment of county, and that his nomination, fraudulently procured, ought not commend itself to the favorable consideration of the party in the remaining counties of the district.

A. A. BARKER.

TALL TREES IN AUSTRALIA.—Recent explorations go to show that the great Australian trees exceed in height, though not in circumference, the giants of California; though some of the Australians must be regarded as very respectable in girth, as well as height, the hollow trunk of one of them being large enough to admit three horsemen to enter and turn without dismounting, while they lead a fourth horse. A fallen tree in the recess of Dandenong, Victoria, was measured not long since and found to be four hundred and twenty feet long; another on the Black Spur, ten miles from Healerville, measured four hundred and eighty feet. The highest trees on the Sierra Nevada, California, yet discovered, reach only four hundred and fifty feet,—the average size being from three to four hundred feet in height and from twenty five to thirty four in diameter. In Calaveras county, and in Mariposa county, there are numerous groves of these lofty trees; though we believe none of them reach quite the altitude of the Sierra Nevada trees, which grow in small groves, at a height of four thousand feet or more above the level of the sea. The wood of these trees closely resembles red cedar, and the reddish brown bark is sometimes 18 inches thick; and the age of some of the oldest has been computed at from two to three thousand years; that is, some of them are about coeval in their birth with David and others were about starting into life when Romeo was reducing ancient Greece to the rank of a Roman province.

Never give to the public time that you cannot afford to spare from your business. Your business has the first claim to all the time necessary for doing it well.

THE FENIAN INVASION.

Two Fights and One Big Rout.

ST. ALBANS, May 26, 1870

The first action in the Fenian invasion occurred yesterday. The raiders, under the command of General O'Neill, crossed the frontier opposite Franklin, Vt, and had a skirmish with a body of of Canadian troops, several of the invaders being killed and wounded. During the fight General O'Neill was arrested by United States Marshal Foster and taken back to St. Albans, where he was arraigned before the United States Commissioner for violation of the neutrality laws, and sent to Burlington, to be committed in default of $24,000 bail. The arrest of O'Neill is confirmed by official dispatches received at headquarters of the Military Division of the Atlantic in this city last night. Fenian bands were reported at other points, but there is no news of their crossing. The Canadian authorities are rapidly sending troops forward to defend the border. Detachments of the United States troops are also arriving on the American side.

MALONE, May 27, 8,40 P M.—General Starr, of Cincinnati, crossed the line at Trout river, at seven o'clock this morning, and advanced with his command, not numbering more than 300, about five hundred yards, when they deployed on the right and left of the road, and extreme right resting on Trout river. He had not occupied the position long when the British and Canadians emerged from the woods, a little in front, and on the other side of the Fenians.

The Canadians, consisting of 500 men of the Sixty ninth regiment, under General Bogot, and 300 volunteers, marched down the road from Huntingdon; on reaching Holbrook they deployed west. The Fenians coming within range, the Canadians opened fire, the desultory volleys taking the Fenians by surprise. A line of battle was at once formed by the British, and a sharp, steady fire opened on the Fenians.

A rail fence in front of the latter was immediately converted into a stockade. The Fenians were told by Gen. Spear to keep up a steady fire for ten minutes. They obeyed the order and stopped the advance of the British. Before the expiration of the ten minutes the Canadian troops, outnumbering the Fenians, made a movement as if they intended to flank the Fenians, when Gen. Speer formed a rear guard and a retreat was ordered.

The Fenians became utterly demoralized, owing to the incompetency of their officers, and retreated pell mell across the line, leaving one killed, one prisoner, and two wounded, one through the thigh and the other in the head. The Fenians abandoned twenty barrels of biscuit, and a large number of uniforms and arms, which were seized by U.S. Marshal Benedict.

Proclamation by the President.

WASHINGTON, May 24, 1870.

The President this afternoon issued a proclamation setting forth that he has received information of illegal and unlawful expeditions being fitted out in the United States for the invasion of the Dominion of Canada, a province of the Crown of Great Britain, a country with which the United States is at peace, and in view of such information duly authenticated, the President warns all persons engaged in such expeditions of the consequence of such illegal acts, and announces that if captured they will not be shielded from the penalties so incurred by them, and that the United States will not interfere in their behalf. He enjoins on all the officers of the United States to employ all legal authority to interpose and to apprehend such unlawful expeditions, and orders all the participants in their designs, and aid to bring to justice every such offender.

Would it not appear to a candid man that a certain show company in refusing to advertise in our columns thereby informs our two thousand or more readers that it don't wish their patronage?

Picnics are becoming the order of the day. When conducted on the principles of sociability and fraternity, we think they should be encouraged, but when gotten up with bad objects in view they should be discountenanced.

Patrick Harkins, residing in Cambria county, while undermining, was instantly killed on the 25th inst., by a ton of coal falling on his head and arms. He was 49 years of age, and leaves a wife and seven children.

Mr. Kennedy King, the efficient Express agent of this place, has been made the happy recipient of a horse and wagon by the Adams Express company. The Company thought the barrow was not the express thing for him and neither it was.

A man named John Karns, in Altoona, cut his throat from ear to ear the other week, since which time he has had no need to shave. He was a man of dissipated habits, the papers say; we think he was rather dizzy-pated to thus end his existence.

The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania, I. O. of Good Templars, will hold its next annual session at Gettysburg on the 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th of June. There are now about 700 Lodges in the State, and it is expected there will be from eight hundred to one thousand members and representatives in attendance during the sessions.

Memorial Day.

Yesterday was duly observed as Decoration Day by a large number of our people. At one o'clock the procession was formed in the following order:

The Silver Cornet Band and Drum Corps,
Chief Marshal, W. K. Burchinell,
Clergy,
Post No. 33, G. A. R., thirty-one members bearing wreaths,
Huntingdon Light Infantry, thirty members, dressed in new uniforms, with guns and accoutrements
Cassville Soldiers' Orphans' School, forty-two boys, bearing wreaths, and fifty eight girls.

The line of march was through the principal streets to the Cemetery, where the exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. J. C. Clarke, after which the General Orders were read by Comrade T. W. Myton. The Soldiers' Orphans then sung a pathetic piece entitled 'O'er my father's grave,' after which the memorial address was delivered by Rev. B. B. Hamlin, in a touching and eloquent manner. The ceremony of decorating the graves was performed in the usual impressive manner, wreaths and boquets being placed on each soldier's grave, by the surviving comrades in the Grand Army of the Republic.

From one to four o'clock the places of business were closed, and the afternoon being pleasant nothing occurred to mar the full observance of the ceremony. Many citizens of the county were present, showing that our people still hold in grateful remembrance the patriotic dead, and love to gather to do them honor.

The Huntingdon Light Infantry attracted universal attention, this being their first appearance in their new uniforms, and their soldierly bearing gave evidence that they had been well drilled. Their presence inspired the reflection that while the dead of the Republic were receiving the honors of a thankful people, they had learned the lesson of patriotism taught by these ceremonies and are ready to battle for their country.

The Soldiers' Orphans gave a free concert in the Court House in the evening. The room was jammed with people. The exercises consisted of declamations and singing, and as one pupil followed the other in the order of declaiming, the audience were inspired by the healthy and animated countenances of each, and continued applause greeted the praisworthy efforts of the pupils.

MILITARY SERVICES — Previous to adjournment the Legislature passed an act relating to militia organization of the State and militia tax. The bill provides as follows:

"Each and every person not now, or who shall not hereafter become a member of some military organization shall pay to the collector of taxes in the city, county, borough, or township in which he shall reside, the sum of fifty cents annually, the payment of which sum shall exempt him from liability to perform military service except under orders to prevent or repel invasion, or to suppress insurrection, tumult, or riot; the proceeds to be devoted to sustaining volunteer military organizations, and in any county in which there shall be no volunteer military organizations, the money received into the brigade fund, as aforesaid, shall be payed by the county treasurer of said county at the close of each year to the school board of the several school districts in said county, in proportion to the number of taxable inhabitants in said district, to be used for school purposes."

THE MOST REMARKABLE CASE ON RECORD.—The publisher of the Boston Investigator sent a bill to a subscriber at Hardin, Ill., for four years back subscription, amounting to $14, and requested to be informed if there was any error in the bill. The subscriber Mr. A. T. Yandle answered that there is an error in the bill, as $3 50 should be added for interest on that which should have been paid in advance. He remits $17,50 on the old account, and sends an additional seven dollars for a year in advance for himself and a neighbor. We regard this as one of the most remarkable newspaper incidents on record, and when we consider that Mr. Yandle pays all this money for a paper that openly advocates infidelity to the christian religion, and is, probably, of the same faith of himself, we are constrained to admonish some of those who are really sound in faith to follow, in their practical life, the example of this "desperately wicked man."—Ex.

MAN HURT.—Fred. Pickett, a citizen of this place, was badly hurt by the cars on Saturday morning last.—He attempted to cross the track at Montgomery street, but not seeing a train approaching his leg was caught by the locomotive and broken in two places. He was taken to his home, and it was found necessary to amputate the limb above the knee. Mr. P. is a poor man, a stone cutter, and is very unfortunate, as he is a cripple for life.

P. S.—Mr. Pickett died this morning at five o'clock from the effect of his injuries.

WEARERS of tight boots will no doubt find in the following interesting reading:

"Hard corns are caused by too much presure of the shoe, or by its being so loose as to slide back and forth on the spot where the corn afterward shows itself, Medical books record several cases where paring a hard corn has caused a bleeding, which no known means could arrest, and death ensued. Nothing harder than the finger nail ought ever to be allowed to touch a corn, which can always be cured, or kept from causing inconvenience, by simply bathing the part in warm water for half an hour for several days in succession; often a single bathing will accomplish the object of so softening the part adjacent to the actual corn that it can be picked out with the finger nail, and the shoe can instantly be worn without discomfort, which an hour before gave great pain. It may return in a week, or a month, or a year, but the same treatment will always avail. Paring them causes them to spread and take deeper root."

ADDRESS

NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED.

WHOSE SUFFERINGS HAVE BEEN PROTRACTED

FROM HIDDEN CAUSES, AND WHOSE CASES REQUIRE

PROMPT TREATMENT.

TO RENDER EXISTENCE DESIRABLE

If you are suffering, or have suffered, from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urine organs, or your kidneys, get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky or flocky, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick skum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling on this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you rest less nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business men are always those whose organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged, they are always polite and pleasant in company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflamed by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitution, but those they do business with or for.

How many men, from badly cured diseases, from the effects of self abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in those organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—idiocy, lunacy, paralysis, spinal affections, suicide, and almost every form of disease humanity is heir to—and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

WHAT I KNOW OF FARMING.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

XVII.

COMMERCIAL FERTILIZERS—GYPSUM.

Prices vary so widely in different localities that no fertilizer can be pronounced everywhere cheapest or best worth buying; and yet I doubt that there is a rod of our country's surface in fit condition to be cultivated to which Gypsum (Plaster of Paris) might not be applied with profit.—where it costs $10 or over per ton, I would apply it sparingly—say, one bushel per acre—while I judge three bushels per acre none too much in regions where it may be bought much cheaper. Even the poor man who has but one cow should buy a barrel of it, and dust his stable therewith after cleaning it each day. He who has a stock of cattle should never be without it, and should freely use it, alike in stable and yard, to keep down the noisome odors, and thus retain the volatile elements of the manure.—Every meadow, every pasture, should be sown with it at least triennially; where it is abundant and cheap, as in Central New York, I would apply it each year, unless careful observation should satisfy me that it no longer subserved a good purpose.

As to the time of application, while I judge any season will do, my present impression is that it will do most good if applied when the Summer is hottest and the ground dryest. If, for instance, you close your haying in mid-Summer, having been hurried by the rapid ripening of the grass, and find your meadows backed and cracked by the intense heat, I reckon that you may proceed to dust your meadows with Gypsum with a moral certainty that none of it will be wasted. So if your Corn and other Fall crops are suffering from and likely to be stunted by drouth, I advise the application of Gypsum broad cast, as evenly as may be and as bounteously as its price and your means will allow. I do not believe it so well to apply it specially to the growing stalks, a spoonful or so per hill; and I doubt that it is ever judicious to plant it in the hill with the seed. The readiest and quickest mode of application is also, I believe, the best.

How Gypsum impels and invigorates vegetable growth, I do not pretend to know; but that it does so was demonstrated by Nature long before Man took the hint that she freely gave. The city of Paris and a disintegrated adjacent district rest on a bed of Gypsum, ranging from five to twenty feet below the surface, and considerably in its upper portion by the action of water. This region produces Wheat most luxuriantly, and I presume has done so from time immemorial. At length, it is said, through the debris of the tillers of this soil that the substance which did so much good fortuitously, and (as it were) because it could not do otherwise, might do still more if applied to the soil, with deliberate intent to test its value as a fertilizer. The result, we all understand.

Gypsum is a chemical compound of Sulphur and Lime—so much is agreed; and the theory of chemists has been that, as the winds pass over a surface sown with it, the Ammonia which has been exhaled by a thousand barn-yards, hogs, &c, having a stronger affinity for Sulphur than Lime has, dissolves the Gypsum, combines with the Sulphur, forming a Sulphate of Ammonia, and leaves the Lime to get on as it may. I accept this theory, having no reasons to distrust it; and, knowing that Sulphate of Amonia, is a powerful stimulant of vegetable growth (as any one may be assured by buying a little of it from some druggist and making the necessary application), I can readily see how the desired result might in this way be produced. For our purpose, however, let it suffice that it is produced, of which almost any one may be convinced by sowing with Gypsum and passing by alternate strips or belts of the same clover-field. I suspect that not many fertilizers repay their cost out of the first crop; but I account Gypsum one of them; and I submit that no farmer can afford not to try it. That its good effect is diminished by many and frequent applications, is highly probable; but there is no hill or slope to which Gypsum has never yet been applied which ought not to make its acquaintance this very year. I am confident that there are pastures which might be made to increase their yield of Grass one-third by a moderate dressing of it.

I have heard Andrew D. Dickinson late of Steuben County, and one of the best unscientific, unlearned farmers ever produced by our State, maintain that he can not only enrich his own farm but impoverish his neighbors' by the free use of Gypsum on his woodless hills. The plastered land attracts and absorbs not only its own fair proportion of the breeze-borne Ammonia, but much that, if the equilibrium had not been disturbed by such application, would have been deposited on the adjacent hills. As Mr. D. makes not the smallest pretensions to science, the coincident between his dictum and the chemists' theory is noteworthy.

Now that our country is completely gridironed with Canals and Railroads, bringing whatever has a mercantile value very near every one's door, I suggest that no township should go without Gypsum. Five dollars will buy at least two barrels of it almost anywhere; and two barrels may be sown over five or six acres. Let it be sown so that its effect (or non-effect) may be palpable; give it a fair, careful trial, and await the result. If it seem to subserve no good purpose, be not too swift to enter up judgement, but buy two barrels more, vary your time and method of application, and try again. If the result be still null, let it be given up that Gypsum is not the fertilizer needed just there—that some ill-understood peculiarity of soil or climate renders it there ineffective. Then let its use be there abandoned; but it will still remain true that, in most localities and in countless instances, Gypsum has been fully proved one of the best and cheapest commercial fertilizers known to mankind.

ARITHMETICAL PROBLEM.—There is a will on file in the office of Register of Wills of Lancaster county that has set the Executors to ciphering. It contains in substance the following clause:

"I give the sum of $1,269 96 to my four children, to be divided among them in such sums, as each will have equal sums, upon arriving at the age of twenty-one years. Distribution to be made April 1st, 1870. The ages of the children, April 1st, 1870: Susan, 21 years; Joseph, 19 years, 15 days; John, 16 years, 5 months, 26 days; Jonas, 10 years, 11 months, 18 days."

The auditor, in making a distribution of the estate, was required to ascertain what amount was due to each child on the 1st of April, 1870. Such of our readers as are fond of tough arithmetical questions may exercise their ingenuity on this.

"Is my face dirty?" asked a young lady from the backwoods, while seated with her aunt at the dinner table on a steamboat running from Cairo to New Orleans. "Dirty? No. Why did you ask?" "Because that insulting waiter insists upon putting a towel beside my plate. I've thrown three under the table, and yet every time he comes round he puts another one before me."

A country postmaster had posted a notice, in his office directing people to "lick their own stamps or else the letters won't go."

A TOMBSTONE in Me., erected to the memory of a wife, bears the inscription: "Tears cannot restore her, therefore I weep.

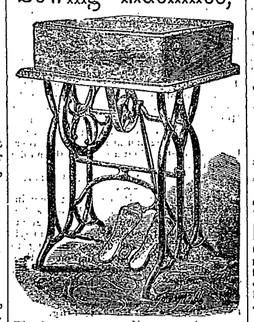
WHEELER & WILSON'S
HIGHEST PREMIUM
LOCK STITCH
Sewing Machines,



Received the only GOLD MEDAL at the PARIS EXPOSITION, 1867.
They are adapted to all kinds of Family Sewing, and to the use of Seamstresses, Dressmakers, Tailors, Manufacturers of Shirts, Collars, Skirts, Cloaks, Mantillas, Clothing, Hats, Caps, Corsets, Linen Goods, Umbrellas, Parasols, etc. They work equally well upon silk, linen, woolen and cotton goods, with silk, cotton or linen thread. They will seam, quilt, gather, hem, fell, cord, braid, bind, and perform every species of sewing, making a beautiful and perfect stitch, alike on both sides of the article sewed.
The qualities which recommend them are:
1. Beauty and excellence of stitch, alike on both sides of the fabric sewed.
2. Strength, firmness and durability of seam, that will not rip nor ravel.
3. Economy of Thread.
4. Attachments and wide range of application to purposes and materials.
5. Compactness and elegance of model and finish.
6. Simplicity and thoroughness of construction.
7. Speed, ease of operation and management, and quietness of movement.
Instructions free to all. Machines kept in repair, one year free of charge.

GET THE BEST
READY ROOFING
Suitable for all Buildings, Dwellings, Barns, Churches Factories, &c., and for all climates; equally adapted to flat or steep roofs, and can be applied by any ordinary workman.
THE READY ROOFING
Is more durable than tin, and costs not cost one-half so much. It is cheaper than shingles, far more durable, and fire-proof. It is made of the heaviest fabric ever used for the purpose, and is put up in rolls ready for shipment to any part of the world. Send for circular and samples (sent free).
We also manufacture
GRANITE CEMENT,
For repairing all kinds of leaky roofs, chimneys, skylights, &c. This Roofing Cement forms a permanent adhesive coating over the whole surface of all roofs, whether tin, shingle or composition, completely closing up leakages, and being composed largely of ground granite, wheels sets and hardens, and soon becomes an artificial Slate or Stone covering.
ROOF PAINT,
For coating Tin and all kinds of metal and composition roofs. It will not run, crack, or peel off, but form a permanent and perfect protection, wherever placed. It is furnished at half the cost, and possesses twice the durability of the common oil paints used for such purposes.
